

International Women's day 2023

In one of our last sessions looking all around my room for inspiration I realized something that resulted in the below poem:

In my room traces of strong women are hidden on the shelf.

Making them visible will be my chosen task.

Saying their names is only the beginning.

March 8 is the International Women's Day since the beginning of the last century. At the second international socialist women's conference in Copenhagen (Denmark) in August 1910 more than 100 women from 17 countries planned this international day to speed up the initiation of the right to vote for women.

Over the years the international movement grew and further topics became relevant for the women as for example the right for abortion, world wide peace, gender equality, equal payment and many more.

For me personally the live and work of women, especially artists, in the history and today is very inspiring and motivating. I feel admiration and also respect for how they managed to follow their call against all conventions and obstacles.

So today we would like to celebrate all women in the world, say their names, see their lives, cherish all their achievements and support their visions.

Here you can see some of the women who are important for me.

Can you think of a woman you admire?

What aspects of her personality and her life do impress you?

What do you want to know about her?

How are you an example for younger women and girls that you know?

Let us share stories and thoughts about those women who are important to us.
